Plant Tour

8 Charlestown Street
Devens, MA 01434

In 2000 Christopher M. Sandusky and James Banks had an idea—no money or customers—but a solid business idea in which they wholeheartedly believed. Their attempts to secure financing failed and they decided to “just do it.” Working from their home basements, they launched Integrated Process Technologies and in just one decade have become a thriving business with 80 employees and have established a strong international footprint. In 2001 IPT moved into a real office in Holliston. Three years later the company headed to Marlborough. In 2005 with revenues and staff growing, IPT purchased Ren-Tec Corporation, a small privately owned mechanical contracting company in Littleton. They could now run a mechanical contracting business in addition to process engineering. In 2006 they opted to become property owners and purchased the Riggs gymnasium, an unused building at Fort Devens. IPT collaborated with Mass Development which helped expedite the permitting process. They redesigned the building creating a modern 25,000 square foot state of the art fabrication facility and engineering office.

In the last four years IPT has continued to expand services, increase revenues and augment staff. The company has earned several prestigious awards along the way, including a spot on the INC. Magazine list of fastest growing companies, and Entrepreneur of the Year award. Originally a consulting engineering firm, IPT now comprises five operating divisions.
